Nagasaki Kunchi

English Language Guide

October 7th – 9th

What is "Kunchi"?

Kunchi comes from the ancient custom of holding a celebration on the ninth day of the ninth month of the lunar calendar, which was considered a lucky day. The ninth day is pronounced "ku nichi", which gradually changed into "kunchi" in Nagasaki, and came to mean a celebration holiday. Suwa Shrine was built in 1624. The Nagasaki Kunchi Festival began ten years later, and now has a history of more than 370 years.

created and distributed by the students of Nagasaki Minami High School

More than 40 of Nagasaki city's historic towns perform at the festival, alternating with each other in a seven-year cycle. The performances are considered to be an offering to the deity of Suwa Shrine, called Ujigamisama. This year's performing towns (called odoricho) are:

- ① Kanaya-machi
- ② Hon-odori

- ③ Six dancers perform a classical-style hon-odori dance, called

"秋晴勢獅子諏訪祭日",

whose name translates as "clear autumn brave lion Suwa festival day dance". Four of the six dancers quickly transform themselves into two brave lions in the middle of the dance, a highlight of the performance. Children also join the dancing, signing a song whose lyrics humorously explain the origin of the town's name.

- ① Nishifurukawa-machi
- ② Yagura-daiko;
Hon-odori

- ③ A yagura-daiko is a drum that was placed on top of an arms storehouse and beat to signal the start and end of a sumo wrestling event. In the Edo period, in Kyushu, the sumo tour was held only in Nagasaki. Because Nishifurukawa town, which organized this tour, had a strong link with sumo, they chose yagura-daiko as their main Kunchi offering, performing it for the first time in 1821. This year marks the town's first Kunchi performance in 14 years. The town will also present a sumo folk song, bow and arrow exhibition, and a hon-odori traditional dance.

Legend: ① Odoricho (Performing town)
② Performance ③ Performance Description

- ① Shindaiku-machi
- ② Shibu; Hikidanjiri

- ③ Young women wearing hakama (long, pleated skirts worn over a kimono) dance elegantly to the song "Shukuga no uta" (song of celebration). And men bravely and energetically move around a boat called hikidanjiri, while lively classical Japanese music is played. The boat's roof is modelled after Kasuga Shrine in Nara.

- ① Suwa-machi
- ② Ja-odori

- ③ Suwa town's offering is the ja-odori (dragon dance), which was first presented in 1886. The dragon is controlled by eleven people, called jakata. Jakata are periodically switched out with replacement handlers in the blink of an eye. The "twin dragon dance", in which a blue and white dragon each pursue a golden ball is the epitome of Kunchi. The town's kasaboko is decorated with embroidery of a white fox.

- ① Enokizu-machi
- ② Kawabune

- ③ Enokizu town will present the oldest kawabune (riverboat), made in 1949. With various kinds and sizes of drums playing a melodic rhythm, the boat is repeatedly brought forward and back powerfully. Children who appear dressed as fishermen are a highlight of the performance. The performance is exciting and showy and will charm the audience.

- ① Nigiwai-machi
- ② Tairyo maniwai
Ebisu-bune

- ③ Nigiwai town had performed a hon-odori dance until 1986, when it was replaced with the current offering so that many of the young people who live in the town could take part in the festival. The town's offering is a celebration of a good haul of fish. The main boat, called Ebisu, is 4.5 meters high and weighs 4 tons. There are also two smaller boats. The highlight is the dynamic pulling and turning of the Ebisu.

- ① Shinbashi-machi
- ② Oranda-manzai;
Hon-odori

- ③ Oranda-manzai is a dance that was created in 1933, and tells the story of Dutchmen coming to Nagasaki. (Oranda is Japanese for "Holland".) Dancers representing Dutchmen carry fans or drums. The highlight is a scene in which they move comically as they meet four geisha. This performance is a fixture at Kunchi, performed by other towns as well.

What is a kasaboko?

Each odoricho's performance begins with the dance of a kasaboko: a huge, parasol-like object. The kasaboko has a placard with the town's name, decorations representing the town placed on top, and a veil draped all around the sides. Each kasaboko weighs 130-150 kg, and is carried on the shoulders of one person inside. This person can't see around him, so a second person, the kasaboko-toryo, guides him by using a small flag.
